

North Carolina Independents (NCI) continues to grow! They're holding meetings around the state, most recently in Durham and soon in Charlotte. Check out their newly revamped website for the latest news and an article by candidate Shawn Eckles about why he's an independent.

In Alabama, a GOP-initiated bill to force partisan registration and close the primaries has been passed out of committee and is now going to the Senate and House for a vote. Bob Friedman, founder of Independent Alabama, is not taking this sitting down. He's organizing a grassroots outreach and media campaign to save open primaries. If you'd like to get involved, contact Bob at bobby3d@bellsouth.net.

Kudos to Evelyn Dougherty of the Massachusetts Coalition of Independent Voters for her letter to editor in the Jewish Journal, where she talks about the recent National Conference of Independents and plans in Massachusetts to fight for Top Two Open Primaries....a position which recently got editorial support in the Boston Globe.

Last week, the NYC Independence Party--the voice of New York City's one million independent voters--released a comprehensive political reform package to the press -- The Antidote to Corruption is Democracy. Take a look!

Independent Pennsylvanians, with their headquarters in Philadelphia, have launched a new activist hub in Pittsburgh led by Brad and Rachel Wilson. Says organization founder Jenn Bullock, "We are attending political events, conducting an open primaries petitioning campaign, and submitting editorials addressing the two-party stranglehold on our political system (Check out this one by activist John Dowlin from Central PA's Patriot News)." To get involved, contact Jenn at independentpa@gmail.com or in Pittsburgh, Brad Wilson at heymr.wilson@gmail.com.

Dialing for Dollars - On April 24, California's IndependentVoice.Org kicked off their Spring fundraising drive last week. Director of IndependentVoice.Org Jason Olson and his team are rarin' to go: "There are 3.8 million registered independents in California, and we are committed to finding the grassroots leaders among them. That's how we ensure that California keeps moving in a nonpartisan direction, and that's how we spread Top Two Nonpartisan Primaries across the country."
